

ALBUM CHILD LABOR IN THE EARLY 1900S \(PRIMARY SOURCE LEARNING ACTIVITY\)

Album Description

This learning activity uses photographs from to look at child labor in the early 1900s. It asks students to think about how children worked through illness and injury as well as how the jobs themselves were disabling. This album takes a broad view of disability, including everything from permanent physical disabilities to temporary injuries to both acute and chronic illnesses. This is a purposefully large album to include a wide variety of experiences. Teachers can pick out one or two photos to analyze or they can split their class into groups to tackle the full set.

*Note: Before starting this exercise, discuss respectful language and historical terms (like crippled) which are considered offensive today.

Consider starting with the Observe, Reflect, Question approach to analyze the photographs.

For background information, I suggest looking at the National Child Labor Committee collection. There are also two lesson plans about child labor on the LOC website (Child Labor in America & Child Labor and the Building of America), but neither of them confronts the role disability played in these children's lives like this album does.

Potential Discussion Questions

1. What were some of the dangers children encountered while working? (In what ways were these workplaces disabling?) Be specific.
2. How did disability, injury, and illness shape children's work lives in the early 1900s? Choose specific examples from the photographs and captions to support your answer.
3. What are the differences between what happens when these children got sick or injured versus what happens in your life?
4. What do you think these children were feeling? What can you infer from their facial expressions and body language?
5. How did these photos (and captions) help reformers efforts for protective child labor laws?

Discussion questions on health examinations

1. Why did child labor activists advocate for state laws that required health examination for child workers?
2. How did the photos of child workers help support these reform efforts?
3. What might have been some of the unintended negative consequences of such examinations?

EXCERPT FROM COMPULSORY SCHOOL ATTENDANCE & CHILD LABOR (1921; IMAGE

Compulsory health provisions

In enacting the first compulsory education law in America the General Court of Massachusetts Bay clearly had in mind the moral as well as the intellectual and economic welfare of children. Two hundred years later, when the descendants of these Puritan law-makers were fighting for compulsory school attendance and child labor laws in Massachusetts and Connecticut, their strongest argument was that children were growing up without proper opportunity to develop their moral natures and under conditions prejudicial to health. Relatively early, the more progressive states began to exclude children from occupations regarded as physically or morally dangerous. Later, factory inspectors were given authority to remove children from such employment as seemed unsuited to their strength; and, finally, the modern state provided that no minor should enter upon dangerous employment and that no child under sixteen should leave school to engage in any sort of labor exclusive of home duties and farming, without first submitting to a thorough medical examination and securing a physician's written assurance of physical fitness for the specific

Teaching Notes:

To cut down the source, just use the last sentence:

"the modern state provided that no minor should enter upon dangerous employment and that no child under sixteen should leave school to engage in any sort of labor exclusive of home duties and farming, without first submitting to a thorough medical examination and securing a physician's written assurance of physical fitness for the specific tasks proposed."

Background info: before first federal child labor law passed in 1938, states had their own child labor laws

Pittsfield, Mass. The Berkshire County Eagle, Wednesday, July 14, 1915. Hand Cut Off. Clinton Stewart, aged 12, son of William Stewart of South Stephentown, N.Y., is at the House of Mercy hospital as the result of an accident he met with last Tuesday. He was operating his father's mowing machine when the machine struck a stone and he was thrown in front of the knives of the mower, which cut his left hand off. He was brought to the hospital and his condition is very satisfactory.

ACCIDENT TO YOUNG MILL WORKER. GILES EDMUND NEWSOM (PHOTO OCTOBER 23RD, 1912) WHILE WORKING IN SANDERS SPINNING MILLE [I.E., MILL], BESSEMER CITY, N.C., AUGUST 21ST, 1912, A PIECE OF THE MACHINE FELL ON TO HIS FOOT MASHING HIS TOE. THIS CAUSED HIM TO FALL ON TO A SPINNING MACHINE AND HIS HAND WENT INTO UNPROTECTED GEARING, CRUSHING AND TEARING OUT TWO FINGERS. HE TOLD THE ATTORNEY HE WAS 11 YEARS OLD WHEN IT HAPPENED. HIS PARENTS ARE NOW TRYING TO MAKE HIM 13 YEARS OLD. THE SCHOOL CENSUS TAKEN AT THE TIME OF THE ACCIDENT MAKES HIM 12 YEARS OLD (PARENTS' STATEMENT) AND SCHOOL RECORDS SAY THE SAME. HIS SCHOOL TEACHER THINKS HE IS 12. HIS BROTHER (SEE PHOTO 3071) IS NOT YET 11 YEARS OLD. BOTH OF THE BOYS WORKED IN THE MILL SEVERAL MONTHS BEFORE THE ACCIDENT. HIS FATHER, (R.L. NEWSOM) TRIED TO COMPROMISE WITH THE COMPANY WHEN HE FOUND THE BOY WOULD RECEIVE THE MONEY AND NOT THE PARENTS. THE MOTHER TRIED TO BLAME THE BOYS FOR GETTING JOBS ON THEIR OWN HOOK, BUT SHE LET THEM WORK SEVERAL

Teaching Notes:

Ellie - Such powerful stories!

I would add a version of my ever recurring question: Who is responsible to protect and care for children? Clearly Hine had a perspective on that question. Changing ideas about the answer show much about how American society adapted to industrialization and urbanization. Answers continue to change today.

Teaching Notes:

These images and the newspaper clips are so powerful. What a great and thorough album. I think that the visuals will really help young learners understand how dangerous child labor was/is and the importance of child labor laws. There will be some important reflections and realizations about how many children spend their free time today vs. in the past. Mother Jones and Her Army of Mill Children is a 2020 nonfiction picture book about child labor that would fit nicely with this album/lesson.

Teaching Notes:

That's a great question! And one I hadn't thought about before, but it's so relevant.

Teaching Notes:

Oh wow, what a cool book! Thanks for sharing
