[STRING BEAN HARVEST, MARION COUNTY, WILLAMETTE VALLEY, OREGON]

327 23
Pacific Northwest
November 13, 1939

GENERAL CAPTION NO. 46

DATE: August, 1939
PLACE: Marion County, Willamette Valley, Oregon
SUBJECT: String bean harvest

The bean crop requires a large number of harvesters for a few weeks in August of each year. Beans are trained up strings attached to cross wires similar to those in hop yards, only lower. Crops are grown mostly by small farmers. Pickers are partly local people, partly from nearby portions of Oregon, who work seasonally only in the bean crop, and partly migrants who follow the crops from harvest to harvest. Many of these have come originally from outside Oregon, principally from Kansas and other states of the northern Great Plains. Some have come from Oklahoma and other states of the Southwest. Most of the pickers camp on the land of the growers. Small farmers do not maintain organized, well-equipped camps. There is less formality and freer more intimate relationship between small farmers and pickers than between the large growers and workers in California. There are one or two large camps which charge rental. 1939 pickers' wages are $1 per 100 lbs.

A Small Farmer: "We watch all the time for agitators. An agitator will turn the whole yard upside down in two hours."
