

ALBUM CHILD LABOR IN RHODE ISLAND

Album Description

This album contains a collection of images taken by photographer Lewis Hine during his investigative work with the National Child Labor Committee between 1908 and 1924. The author of this album works for the Rhode Island Historical Society and has focused on Hine's images from Rhode Island for to use in an activity plan for grades 3 to 12.

In addition to the Hine photographs there are samples of other sources being used to advocate for child labor laws in this period such as a poem and political cartoon. The included activity plan walks you through an example for how to utilize these sources together for classroom study.

Teaching Notes:

And I am thinking that the last 5 primary sources in this album would all make a great Q-focus individually if anyone wanted to create a QFT lesson on Children's Rights or Child Labor. What do you think?

Teaching Notes:

Geralyn, your album is outstanding! Even though you have focused on R.I., it is universal because anyone of us could go into the Hine Collection and search for child laborers in our own state then use your suggestion in your PD Plan file for teaching with those photos. I especially appreciated your last 5 primary sources. The photos often are seen in the lesson plans and inquiry activities that our PDPI participants create but these 5 sources are unique and as  Cheryl Best mentioned in her post would encourage today's children to really connect to those photographs! Thank you for adding to our Child Labor primary source sets!!!

Teaching Notes:

I particularly loved the "Declaration of Dependence by the Children of America..." Nice collection! I wonder if the kids could write their own for by the Children in America in the_____.

I wonder what they would come up with?
